Who I am.

Homo sapiens textus creativus, born 1976 along with an identical twin sister, displaying a pronounced affinity to linguistics, an unusual passion for grammar and spelling as well as an earnest love for "my" languages German, Spanish, English and French.

What I'm good at.

Writing, speaking, reading, thinking. Not just in one language but in four.

Where I've been so far.

Geographically. 10 years in Linz/Austria, 7 years in Mexico City, 6 months in the US, another 2 years in Linz/Austria, 5 years in Salzburg, six months in France, 4 years in Vienna.

Professionally. Master's degree in journalism and French, first steps in the fields of public relations, publicity, journalism. Afterwards job @ the Austrian National Bank accompanying the introduction of the Euro. Back to what's closest to my heart: writing. Started my own one-woman-show (translations and copywriting) in 2002. Currently also studying towards a Master's Degree in interpretation.

What I strive for.

To surround myself with what I like best: letters. Whether slogans, PR texts, brochures, scientific books or love letters, whether created by myself or others.

What I like.

Gabriel García Márquez and Javier Marías, framed pictures, sarcasm, chess, Christmas, emotions, air conditioning, customer service.

What I don't like.

Racism, algae, plastic tablecloths, cigarettes, bad-tempered drivers, TV, darkness.
