Technical translation

Translation is at the core of any localization initiative and technical know-how is just as crucial as refined linguistic skills. That is why our translators combine IT competence with a mastery of their native language. VisionTrans draws a clear distinction between technical and marketing writing styles to ensure that the product is delivered as if it had been originally created in the target country. This includes the nuances that only in-country translators can detect to guarantee product usability and sales success.

In addition to performing software localization tasks, VisionTrans also provides Document Translation services, which are often used in conjunction to provide manuals, on-line help, and browser-displayed text to accompany the localized software. To help you better understand how VisionTrans will create a customized localization solution for your organization, please request a proposal and contact us directly.

Web site localization

Whether your web site is database-driven, dynamic or static – VisionTrans will localize it for you in almost any language. Your source files can be HTML, XML, MS Access, Flash, or similar format. We use a range of web localization tools to process the files and deliver an identical localized version.

Software localization

The most basic reason for a software company to localize its software products is to increase revenue and net income. The logic is very simple: Higher total revenue compensates larger costs on research and development, and product marketing costs. Larger budgets allow creating better products and better chances of dominating the market's niche. As the only localization provider with comprehensive language capability, Translation Services USA offers complete solutions in software localization.

DTP

Desktop publishing

Skilled DTP engineers localize of the buttons, images and animated GIF and Flash files contained in the website. We can provide specialized consulting for the selection of colors that are appropriate to the local culture and adapt Java and Active script applets.

Project Manager

Project managers at VisionTrans play a pivotal role in maintaining client relationships and leading a project from start to finish. Project managers are dedicated to the success of their clients and are assigned to projects based on their industry knowledge and experience. They work to harmonize the efforts of the VisionTrans project team, ensure quality, meet deadlines, and coordinate with the internal client staff. VisionTrans' project managers tailor their management approach to create a solution that meets both the needs of the client and the goals of the project.

Communication

Project managers work with their clients to create collaborative reporting procedures, ensuring that information is provided in a useful, accurate, and efficient format. Communication tools include regular issues lists, addressing outstanding project tasks or problems. In addition, updated schedules chronicle project deliverables and milestones. Daily production meetings and weekly project meetings are held to keep team members informed and guarantee task completion. VisionTrans is extremely flexible in determining the best solution for project communication.
