Dear whom it may concern,

I, Ian Thomas, the head software developer for the WeCroak app, am writing this letter on behalf of Sam Mazzotta.

After our app was profiled in an Italian language newspaper in spring 2018 and went viral, I received an email from Sam in which he kindly praised the App and offered to help translate it into Italian.

From his very first message, it was immediately clear that he understood both the mission and tone of the WeCroak app; and he very quickly joined our remote team as our primary translator. He very generously donated his time and expertise to working with us. In addition to translating quotes from philosophers, he translated the most mission critical parts of the App: the entire user interface and the consumer-facing iTunes App Store description of the App (here is a link to that description: <https://itunes.apple.com/it/app/wecroak/id1248149943?mt=8>).

Currently WeCroak is the seventh most popular paid “health and wellness” app in the Italian App Store, and that successful ranking wouldn’t have been possible without Sam. Over the years, we have received many requests to translate our app into additional languages, but no other language has had such a committed advocate and strong professional as Sam. He is the reason that the App’s first and only translation exists.

Over the course of the last year, and nearly 40 emails, Sam has always been thorough and unwaveringly committed to the success of this translation.

I look forward to working with Sam again in the future.

If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me directly in regards to this letter.
