I, Tomi

Hello from the expanses of Ostrobothnia! My personal and general information is on display otherwise here on my CV already so I don't want to repeat myself anymore regarding that. I just wanted to say, that if I decide to apply to somewhere regarding a particular job, that means I really want the job and that particular field the job is in interests me and I think that is the most important thing for someone seeking job: interest. Another important thing is passion. When those two wonderful attributes towards something intertwine, something extraordinary happens and that person is worth hiring for, regardless of their prior background.
